Terrorist group Al-Shabaab has attacked a Kenyan college, killing and taking hostages . It is a clear indicator the security situation in East Africa is deteriorating, says Stefan Wolff . More than military action alone is needed to combat terrorism in the region, he says .

Al-Shabaab has claimed an attack on Garissa University College in eastern Kenya. The attack is another step in the ongoing escalation of the terrorist group's activities. It is a clear indicator that the security situation in East Africa is deteriorating fast, writes Peter Bergen.

Somalia-based Al-Shabaab has been behind a string of recent attacks in Kenya. It is predominantly driven by the same radical interpretation of the Koran as al-Qaeda and ISIS. The group employs more opportunistic approaches to shoring up local support.

Manning is serving a 35-year prison sentence for leaking thousands of classified documents. In a series of tweets, the prisoner formerly known as Bradley Manning said she will be using a voice phone to dictate her tweets. She is not allowed Internet access in prison, according to The Guardian.

Manning is serving a 35-year prison sentence for leaking thousands of classified documents. She said she will be using a voice phone to dictate her tweets to a communications firm. The former Army intelligence analyst was convicted of stealing and disseminating 750,000 pages of documents and videos to WikiLeaks.

President Barack Obama tied himself to the mast of a nuclear deal with Iran even before he became the Democratic candidate for president. Peter Bergen: The process has unfolded under the destructive influence of political considerations. He says the notion that Obama is not handling the Iranian threat effectively is contributing to a new war in Yemen.

Frida Ghitis: Reaching a good, solid agreement with Iran is a worthy, desirable goal. But the process has unfolded under the destructive influence of political considerations, she says. She says Obama's political standing and his historic legacy in foreign policy are deeply intertwined with reaching an accord.
